Mile Marker #10: My Collaboration Profile

How you work best with others, and how you plan to work even better.

This module you explored your 16Personalities results and what helps (and doesn't) when you're working with others. This Mile Marker asks you to put that into a short, honest profile.

There's no "best" type for collaboration, only an honest answer and a vague one. Be honest. That's what earns full credit.

Two ways to use this handout. It matches the Mile Marker #10 assignment in Blackboard. Print it and fill it in by hand, or type in the boxes below and save a PDF. Either way, upload the photo, scan, or PDF to the assignment. You can also type your answers in Blackboard instead.

QUESTION 1

Your Type, Strengths & Challenges

What's your 16Personalities type? Describe it in your own words: one short phrase, not the official description. Then name two collaboration strengths and one or two challenges that honestly fit you.

A strong answer gives your type in your own words, and names two strengths and one or two challenges that sound like you, not like a quiz summary.*

Example: "INFJ-T: quiet planner who likes meaningful work. I'm an organized planner and a calm mediator, but I tend to avoid conflict and take on too much."

My type

In my own words

Strengths word bank: clear communicator · supportive teammate · creative problem-solver · organized planner · calm mediator · detail-checker · energizer or motivator · deep thinker · flexible adapter · relationship-builder · big-picture visionary · dependable finisher (Same lists as your Collaboration Snapshot.)

Strength 1

Strength 2

Challenges word bank: hard to get started · taking on too much · hard to speak up · avoiding conflict · coming across too blunt · overwhelmed by chaos · frustrated by unclear instructions · perfectionism · withdrawing under stress · trouble reading tone · over-controlling · resisting schedules

My one or two challenges

QUESTION 2

Why, and What Helps

Pick one challenge from Question 1 and explain why it happens for you. Think of it as a tendency, not a flaw: needing structure, being introverted, processing fast or slow, group anxiety, or how your brain works. (Sharing anything about neurodivergence is always optional.) Then name three strategies that help you work better with others. For one of them, describe a real group experience where it helped, or would have helped.

A strong answer explains the why behind one challenge, names three strategies that fit you, and connects one to a real experience.*

Example: "Group chaos overwhelms me because I process information better when expectations are clear."

Why this challenge happens for me

Strategies word bank: start with clear expectations · communicate my style · play to my strengths · ask clarifying questions · break tasks into pieces · use tools wisely · assume good intent · know my stress signals · use the 2-minute reset

Strategy 1

Strategy 2

Strategy 3

A real group experience where one of these helped, or would have helped

QUESTION 3

What You Need From Your Team

In one sentence, simple and respectful, what do you need from teammates to do your best work?

A strong answer is one clear sentence that's specific, respectful, and something you could actually say to a real team.*

Examples: "I work best when tasks and deadlines are clearly divided." "I thrive when I can think before speaking."

My one sentence

Optional: what it looks like when that need is met, and when it isn't
